

May Day 2006 Red Flag Photo Compilation

A member of the Red Youth Vanguard, a leftist group, marches to mark the traditional May Day holiday in Moscow, Monday, May 1, 2006. (AP Photo/Mikhail Metzel)

An Iraqi worker holds a hammer and sickle during the May day rally in Basra, 550 km (341 miles) south of Baghdad May 1, 2006. Less than 1000 workers joined the May day celebration in the southern Iraqi city of Basra, witnesses said. REUTERS/Atef Hassan

A Lebanese supporter of the Lebanese Communist party holds a map flag with the iconic image of Che Guevara during a demonstration to mark the labor day in Beirut, Lebanon, Monday May 1, 2006. More than 2,500 members of the Lebanese Communist party marched in Beirut Streets to mark the May Day, using the occasion to protest the worsening economic conditions in the country.(AP Photo/Mahmoud Tawil)

Russian nationalists gesture and shout during a demonstration in central Moscow May 1, 2006. Thousands of people on Monday took part in a series of demonstrations on International Workers Day in Moscow. REUTERS/Thomas Peter

A man waves a flag with the sign of the Polish Communist Party (KPP), outside the Polish Academy of Science before a May Day march in central Warsaw May 1, 2006. About 150 supporters of various radical leftist groups took part in the march. REUTERS/Katarina Stoltz

Red communist flag is seen over demonstrators who gather to mark May Day in Russia's Siberian city of Krasnoyarsk May 1, 2006. Thousands of Russians gathered on Monday to celebrate International Workers Solidarity Day. REUTERS/Ilya Naymushin

An activist from the Polish Socialist Party takes part in May Day parade next to a flag bearing the image of revolutionary leader Che Guevara in downtown Warsaw, Poland, Monday, May 1, 2006. More than a million people rallied in traditional May Day protests across Europe, with labor unions in Germany taking aim at corporate greed, backers of the far-right in France marching from a statue of Joan of Arc and communists in Russia honoring Lenin and Marx.(AP Photo/Czarek Sokolowski)

Communist Party activists decorate plaque of Soviet state founder Vladimir Lenin with red lamps beside a pavement on the occasion of May Day, in the eastern Indian city of Kolkata, May 1, 2006. Communist activists celebrate International Workers Solidarity Day Monday. The world's longest-ruling elected 29-years old communist government in the Indian state of West Bengal is seeking another term in office. REUTERS/Jayanta Shaw

Ultraleftist Turks wave their flags and dance to celebrate May Day in Ankara, Monday, May 1, 2006. However police detained some 40 protesters, members of a leftist group, denouncing the International Monetary Fund and the U.S. during an illegal May Day demonstration in downtown Istanbul. (AP Photo/Burhan Ozbilici)

Leftist Turks dance in front of a poster of communist leaders, from left to right, Marx, Engels and Lenin, to celebrate May Day in Ankara, Monday, May 1, 2006. Police detained some 40 protesters, members of a leftist group, who denounced the International Monetary Fund and the U.S. during an illegal May Day demonstration in down town Istanbul.(AP Photo/Burhan Ozbilici)

Bangladeshi workers shout slogans behind a red flag during a May Day demonstration in Dhaka.(AFP/Farjana K. Godhuly)

Indian workers from the Centre of Indian Trade Unions (CITU) and other trade union wings of the Communist Party of India (Marxist) (CPI-M) attend a rally to mark the International Labour Day, or May Day, in the southern Indian city of Bangalore May 1, 2006. REUTERS/Jagadeesh Nv

Supporters of DHKP-C, an outlawed leftist group, march during a May Day demonstration in Istanbul, Turkey, Monday, May 1, 2006. Turkish police detained some 40 leftist protesters during an illegal May Day demonstration in down town Istanbul. Protesters, members of a leftist group called itself 'Struggle,' did not have a permit for a May Day demonstration, although other large protests had permits for demonstrations in other parts of the city. (AP Photo/Osman Orsal)

Communists and antiglobalization supports carry a makeshift spider symbolizing G8 while marching in St.Petersburg, Russia, May 1, 2006, to mark the traditional May Day holiday. In July Russia will host the G-8 summit in the St. Petersburg region. (AP Photo/Dmitry Lovetsky)

Pakistani workers hold posters of communist leaders during a rally to observe Labor Day in Lahore, Pakistan, Monday, May 1, 2006. (AP Photo/K.M. Chaudary)

A communist supporter wears a sweater with the Soviet Union state emblem as she holds a portrait of Josef Stalin during a rally to mark the traditional May Day holiday in St. Petersburg, Russia, Monday May 1, 2006. Many thousands of people took part in the May Day rallies Monday across Russia's vast territory, but official events staged by the ruling pro-United Russia party overshadowed traditional protest marches by the opposition Communists, in an echo of Soviet times. (AP Photo/Dmitry Lovetsky)

A man sings near the flag of revolutionary hero Ernesto 'Che' Guevara, as people crowd Rome's St. John Lateran Square during the traditional May Day concert, Monday, May 1, 2006. (AP Photo/Gregorio Borgia)

Demonstrators from a student's organisation hold a mock coffin reading 'Job Reform' as they take part in a May Day march along with demonstrators from Spain's two main trade unions, the CCOO and the UGT, through central Madrid, May 1, 2006. Spanish unions staged their traditional rally all over Spain, demanding more stable jobs. REUTERS/Paul Hanna

Demonstrators from Spain's two main trade unions, the CCOO and the UGT, take part in a May Day march through central Madrid, May 1, 2006. Spanish unions staged their traditional rally all over Spain, demanding more stable jobs. REUTERS/Paul Hanna

Members of the Red Youth Vanguard, a leftist group, shout slogans during a rally to mark the traditional May Day holiday in Moscow, Monday, May 1, 2006. (AP Photo/Sergey Ponomarev)

Indonesian workers shout slogans during a rally outside the presidential palace in Jakarta, Indonesia, Monday, May 1, 2006. Tens of thousands of workers marked May Day by taking to the streets of Jakarta and other major cities to demand better employee benefits and urge the government not to change labor laws. (AP Photo/Irwin Fedriansyah)

Swedish Prime Minister and Social Democratic leader Goran Persson (C) walks among musicians and flag-bearers during the traditional May Day celebrations in Stockholm, Sweden, May 1, 2006. SWEDEN OUT NORWAY OUT DENMARK OUT NO THIRD PARTY SALES REUTERS/Anders Wiklund/Scanpix

Cuba's President Fidel Castro speaks to thousands of people gathered during International Workers Day at the Plaza of Revolution in Havana, Cuba, Monday, May 1, 2006. (AP Photo/ Javier Galeano)

A woman pushes a trolley with Worker-communist Party flags as she walks in the annual May Day march through London, England May 1, 2006. Thousands of people across Europe took to the streets as part of Traditional May Day protests. REUTERS/Luke MacGregor

Russian members of the Red Youth Avant-garde (AKM) organization shout anti-government slogans during a May Day protest in Moscow. From mountainous Nepal to the industrial heartland of Germany, workers took to the streets around the world in largely peaceful May Day demonstrations for labour rights, as immigrants in the United States prepared protest boycotts.(AFP/Denis Sinyakov)

A woman holds a Marxist-Leninist Communist Party flag as she walks in the annual May Day march through London, May 1, 2006. Thousands of people across Europe took to the streets as part of Traditional May Day protests. REUTERS/Luke MacGregor

On the march : A protestor walks in front of a poster during a May Day demonstration in Kadikoy district in Istanbul. (AFP/Mustafa Ozer)

May Day rally : A Bulgarian anarchist marches during a May Day rally in the center of Sofia. (AFP/Dimitar Dilkoff)

A May Day protestor walks in front of a burning barricade after peaceful May Day protests turned into street fights in Berlin May 1, 2006. Violence broke out on Monday in the district of the German capital, Kreuzberg, after peaceful left-wing and anti-Nazi demonstrations. REUTERS/Pawel Kopczynski

Protesters burn flags of the United States of America in front of the National Palace in Guatemala City, Guatemala, during the celebrations of May Day, on Monday, May 1, 2006. (AP Photo/Alexandre Meneghini)

A Communist makes a peace sign in front of a hammer and sickle flag as she walks in the annual May Day march through London May 1, 2006. Thousands of people across Europe took to the streets as part of traditional May Day protests. REUTERS/Luke MacGregor

Young Communists chant as they participate in the annual May Day march through London, May 1, 2006. Thousands of people across Europe took to the streets as part of traditional May Day protests. REUTERS/Luke MacGregor

Supporters of Venezuela's President Hugo Chavez show their ten fingers as they chant 'Ten million votes,' referring to votes they hope to get in favor of Chavez in this year's December presidential election, as an election poster in support of Peruvian presidential candidate Ollanta Humala is held up at a May Day rally in Caracas, Venezuela, Monday, May 1, 2006. Peru recently recalled its ambassador from Venezuela to protest what it said was President Hugo Chavez's 'persistent and flagrant' interference in Peru's presidential election. (AP Photo/Leslie Mazoch)

A protestor throws [red] paint at a fast food restaurant during a march at a labor day parade in Guatemala City May 1, 2006. REUTERS/Carlos Duarte

Communist supporters carry a banner depicting images of (L-R) Friedrich Engels, Karl Marx, Vladimir Lenin and Joseph Stalin, during rally to commemorate May Day in Tirana May 1, 2006. REUTERS/Arben Celi
